The midnight wind roared through the oaks of Kildare, And a clang from the round tower at intervals came, While St. Bride at the Altar was kneeling in prayer, And her Sisters attended the mystical flame. --Richard Dalton Williams, The Hymn of St. Brigid. T. BRIGID and her companions were hastening on to the place which is inseparably connected with the most active scenes of her life. Cill-Dara, in her native Leinster, would soon become the theatre of the crowning work of her long and useful career. The Lagenians were more than eager for her to return to the home of her childhood. They manifested their impatience for this event by sending a deputation of their prominent sons to our Saint, praying her to dwell amongst them, and promising her a welcome, regal in its warmth, when...
